One of the grandes and most imposing ceremonies of the Catholic Church was performed yesterday, in St. Patrick's Cathedral, Mulberry street. The occasion was the consecration of the three bishops—Right Rev. Drs. Balley, Loughlin, and Fr. Goesbriend—who were recently appointed by the Pope to the newly established dioceses of Newark, Brooklyn and Burlington, Vi. As the ordination of so many bishops at one time is a rather unusual thing in the Catholic Church, and, we believe, entirely without precedent in this country, it may naturally be supposed that it was anticipated with no or-dinary degree of interest by the Catholic portion of the community. Although the price of admission was fixed at one dollar, to prevent too great a throng, it e church was crowded to its utmost capacity, and even the airles were occupied. As it was known bishops and clergy from the residence of Archbishop Hughes, in Mulberry street, to the church, that portion of Prince and Mott streets through which it had to pass was also crowded. This procession left the episcopal residence Mott street side in less than ten minutes after it started the distance being very short. First in the order of the procession were about six of the officiating clergy, who were followed by the Bishops elect and the Assistant Bishops, of whom there were six-Right Rev. Drs. Rap pin, of Cleveland; McClusky, of Albany; Fitzpatrick, of Boston; Connelly, of St. John, N. B.; fimon, of Builalo; and O'Reilly, of Hartford. Then came the Pope's Nuncio, Monseigneur Bedini, over whom a canopy was carried, in accordance with the prescribed forms for such occasions. whom were clothed in rich siik vestments, embroidered with gold. The sacred robes of the Nuncio might be dis tinguished among the others by their magnificence. At the head of the procession was carried a cross, emblematie of the faith of those who walked in it. Archbishop Hughes was prevented from accompanying it or assisting in the ceremony of ordination, by severe indisposition, although be preached the e-mecration sermon.

After the procession entered the church, the officiating clergy and bishops walked circut to the altar, where a chair, or throne, surmounted by a handsome crimson ca-nopy, was erected for the Nuncie. On one side of the altar, and in the enclosed space known as the sanctuary, were placed six small kegs of wine and the same number of loaves of bread, two of each of which were presented in the course of the ceremony to each of the bishops. The assistant bistops were clothed with a cope, and were the mitre on their leads, which is the distinctive mark of their high office. The bishops elect wore the simple biretum, or priest's cap, until invested with the mire by the Nuncio, by whom they were consecrated. The cape is a large mantle, used by priests and others of the inferior mitre corresponds to that which the Jewish high priest wore, and is intended to represent the helmet of salvation, wherewith the bishop, as leader of the Christian people, should be specially protected.

THE CONSECRATION.

When the bishops and clergy had taken their places before the above, the Consecrator, Monseignour Belini, in accordant a with the formula of the Church, went up to his throne, and was there vested in full pontificals, while the three Bishops elect put on the amict, alb, cincture and stole. All being thus prepared, and the Consecrator seated before the middle of the altar, the Bishops elect advanced, each between two of the Assistant Bishops, saluted him, and took their seats opposite. After a brie pause they uncovered their heads and rose from their seats, when one of the Assistant Bishops addressed the Consecrator as fellows :-

Consecrator as is liews:—

Mest Reverend Father, our Holy Mether, the Catholic Church, requires of you to rails this Priest Lore present to the burthersome office of a Bishop

The Consecrator then asks:

Have you the Apostelia commission!
Ann—We have.
Consec—Let it be read.

The Consecrator's Notary, Rev. Mr. McClarron, of this city, here read the mandate, or commission, from the Pope, appointing the bishops. This was very long, and, we believe, was inscribed upon parchment. When the reading of it was concluded, the Bishops elect read the following oath, kneeling-

"I. N., Elect of the Church of N. shall, from this hour, recterward, be obtdiged to blussed Peter, the Apostic, and the holy Keman Church, and to the most blussed father, ope Fins 1X, and to his successors canonically chosen. When they had repeated this oath, they handed the book in which it was recorded to the consecrator, who knelt, and placing both hands upon it, said—
Se may God help me and these hely gespels of God.

The bishops elect and the assistant Bishops new took their seats, and while the consecrator read aloud the "examer," consisting of the following questions, they accompanied him in a low voice:—

At the conclusion of the Examen the consecrator said:

"May your faith be increased by the Lord unto true and eternal blessed ness, beloved brothers in Christ." And all answered. "Amen."

The Consecrator having received the homage of the Bishops elect, turned towards the altar and began the Confident, then went up, increased the altar, and returned to his throne and continued the mass as far as the Alleluifa, or the bast verse of the Tract; meanwhile, the Assistant Bishops excerted the Bishops elect to the side chapel, where they took off their copes, had sandals put upon their feet, received the pecteral cross, tunic and dalmatic, chasuite and maniple. Thus vested, they approached the airs, and, standing between the Assistant Bishops, read mass as far as the Alleluia, or Tract.

During the ceremony of the mass Archbishop Hughes extered the church, and, ascending the pulpit, delivered.

THE CONSECRATION SERMON. I have taken for my text, said the Archbishop, on this occasion the last words of the second chapter of the First pistle of St. Peter :- " For ye were as sheep going satray, but are now returned unto the shepherd and bishop your souls." The preceding portions of this chapter had reference to the ministry, the preaching and the priestheod of the Son of God; and now, in exclusion, he speaks of the Redeemer as the pastor and bishop of the souls of those who believe in him. Nor is this word pastor, or bishop, to be understood, as many other terms in the sacred writings, as a figure or comparison. It is to be unlerstood in its simplicity, meaning the feders of all that expresses, literally and simply. The other Apostles, in their writings, have also inculcated the same great idea of the episcopacy of the Sen of God. But I am not aware that any of them have expressed the whole force of the mission and the ministry of Christ in such brief yet comministion and the ministry of control nature of the prehensive terms. The Redeemer, having once constituted himself a pastor is always a pastor; but the world pastor is not enough. The word bishop implies rule and authority; and it was worthy of feter, the chief of the son of the control of church it sounds most backarous to hear of a foreign rellgion. Just imagine the worl "foreign," as applied to a thorch professing to be Christian! There are no foreign ers in the thruch of Col. We know no distinction of nations as Catholics and members of one old opiscopacy.

Lie the central rays of light streaming from the sun, its members are united. How admirable this spectacle!
Here we may regard a type of the episcopai arch, where every stone is in fitting harmony. I am aware that it has been objected, that to be subject in spiritual matters to the supremacy of the Pope is necessarily a slavery, beeause it is assumed that this confession is relinquishing indivitual independence. Our Saviour has declared that heresy should spring up, and schisms commenced even in the early ages of the Church. Look at the Greek Church. Is it not governed by the fear of the Crar, a man exemplary, it is said, in his private life, but stern, unbending and arbitrary? Look at the Sec of Centerbury since it has shaken off its allegiance to the papacy. Come over to another country, where religious quistions are left to the individual, and see how each member of the sceeding Church is responsible to the caprice or prejudice of the majority. No! there is no form, no comeliness, separate from the centre of Christian unity. And this system of unity is not a device of wise men—no cunning contrivance—Oh, no! it is none of these, but it is the plan of the Son of God. Two priests are now to take their departure, to whom you are descretely attached. One has ministered among you for fourteen or fifteen years. At oventide and carly dawn he was at his post, and throughout all that time his ministry occupied all his attention and his undivided care.
For years he has been my secretary and personal friend;
and I am not going to en arge upon the feelings with which I heard it amounced that he was about being elwas at his post, and throughout all that time his minitios of his labors. But there is something more remains to be said, if

The ceremony of consecration proceeded at the conclusion of the sermon, in the following order, according to the prescribed forms :--

The consecrator sat before the middle of the altar; and the Bishops elect and the assistant bishops approached, and saluting him, took their seats as before.

The consocrator turned towards the Bishops elect, and mid :-"it believes a histor to judge, interpret consecrate, or dain, offer, haptic and confirm." The lithines were now continued, and at the end of them, the consecrator having the Bishops elect kneeling before him, took the Book of the Gospel, and he, together with the assistant Bishops, placed it wide open over the heads and shoulders of the Bishops elect.

After this, the consecrator and the assistant Bishops imposed their hands upon the heads of the Bishops elect, saying, Asips Spiritum Sanctum, Receive the Holy Ghost. The consecrator stood without the mitre, said a prayer, and then chanted in the preface tone, Per connia, dc.

The Veni Creator was now sung to invoke the light of the Hely Ghost, and the consecrator prepared to anoint the elect. The first wrise of Veni Creator ended, the consecrator anointed the heads of the elect, saying:

Fifteenth Anniversary of the Youth's Mis.

sionary Society.

The celebration of the fifteenth anniversary of the Youth's Missionary Association, took place last evening, at the Spring street Church, where a large number of persons were congregated, who seemed deeply interested in the proceedings of the evening.

The exercises commenced with the paster offering up an elequent prayer, exhorting God to pour down blessings upon them while working for the salvation of their

The choir then sung a hymn, which was followed by the reading of the annual report of the Secretary, showing a flourishing c ndition of affairs, and urging them strongly to persevere in the good work they had already so nobly and energetically begun. The report concluded by recom-to persevere in the good work they had already so nobly at denergetically begun. The report concluded by recommending additional outlays this year, in the form of more missionaries for their brethren in the far West, and the other side of the Rocky Mountains.

The Rev. Dr. Fissus then addressed the assemblage. He began by saying that on account of the greatness of this country, the people should attend, in proportion, to religious matters. This country had upwards of 13,000 miles of railmost, 3000 miles of railmost, 3000 miles of railmost, and had more teambers than all the rations of the world. If there was a famine in Europe, this country could easily supply that centinent with plenty of grain. He then spoke of the great extent of territory belonging to the United States. The new States were settled by their relations and friends. There could be found the Smiths, Ferrises, and Williamsss. But among the settlers might be found a large number of Irish and Germans, whose habits, Janguage, and religious ideas were quite different from the matives of this country. It was their duty to make all these people as happy as the Americans. To make them conscious of the value of our institutions it will, said the speaker, be important to teach them the Gospel of Christ. Missionaries should be appointed, whose duty would be to attend to the spiritual wants of the emigrants. The people of New York should be actuated by the same feeling in giving telthese in the far West the bread of Christ as actuated them in contributing largely to the comfort of the Greeks and Irish, when Greecel and Irishand were desolated by famine some years age. It should not be said that they aved strangers and would not deign to help their own brethren on the other side of the Alleghaux mountains. Hitte collections, like drops of rain, amounted in the end to a great deal and would they not feel happy in belog a party towards restoring many a lost sheep to the fold of Carist The choir then sung a hyan written for the occasion, Clory and praise, O God Glory and praise, O God, are thine! Pight and dominion are thy throne; Millions of worlds, through love divine, Make all thy grace and goodness known. O, speed the day when all shall bow At Jesus' feet, and praise his name; Make known thy glory, bless us now, While we thy gracious love preclaim.

Make known thy globy, bless us now,
While we thy gracious love proclaim.

The Rev. Mr. Wann then addressed those assembled, particularly the youthful portion of them. People said that the Rev, gentlemen were apt to take a wrong view of missionary associations; and it was not until the feults of the industry of the missionaries were ripened and ready to plack, that they could understand the importance of missionary expeditions. There should be more attention paid to the morals of children than those of old persons for when the child grows up to manhood, he looks strictly after the morals of his children, and they after theirs, for many generations. Early impressions ages those that govern the whols human family in after life; therefore, how newsary was it to pay attention to "little children." He then went on showing that children, when converted very young, always proved faithful disciples of Goldeout of little according great oaks grow." From the youth Comstock, has sprang up missionary associations in all parts of the Union, the East Indies, the Sandwich Islands, and Turkey in Asia. There was no time like the present to do good; these never was such a want of the gospel as at present, for there was plenty of work for the missionaries to attend to. He then said that poor orphan children had often raised themselves up to be the head of colleges and other excellent institutions, which were, he was happy to say, fast increasing in this happy country. A collection was then taken up, which was followed by some fine sacred music from the choir.

The benediction being then pronounced, the assemblage dispersed to their homes.
